question than the mere removal of Chief Hilton or the mere appointment of another officer in his place, there-fore I take the ground that I have taken. And I want to state right here that I am not afraid to vote according to my convictions, and if I am politically damned as some assert that some Daveler was sur-prised that Fernstrom had not objected to the discussion of party politics in the Council, and be proceeded to call Robinson to task for intimating that there was something back of the re-moval of Hilton and said that if he was the right kind of a man he would tel what the matter was. Robertson then got the floor and said that of all the inconsistent bod-les of men he ever had the pleasure of dealing with the members who repre sent the majority of the City Council are the most inconsistent; he showed how they had insisted on delay in the matter of Chief Hilton and refused to delay the matter in hand. He said that a majority of the Council said this thing should be done and that thing should be done without a minor ity of the Council knowing that it had been considered at all, and asked where the busines was trancated, "It cannot be in this Council chamber," he said; "It cannot be trancated in the ommittee rooms, so we must judge it is the world was a peculiar one, "but of all the peculiar spots in the civilized world. Utah must be the most peculiar and her people the most peculiar." To substantiate his statement, he said that n no other clace could a city counci be found with a membership of four Democrats and eleven Republicans which when divided on actual party lines consisted of a majority of ten and This statement caused Eardley to inquire: "When did you become a Reeply in a way which brought forth great applause and laughter from the long before you learned to be both a Republican and a Democrat." Thi brought such a roar of applause that ters to refrain from demonstrations. Eardley then asked Robertson some thing about the caucus of Democrats and Republicans, and after the latter's explanation, he said: "You would be it caucus with them now if they would smile upon you," to which Robertson retorted, "Well, I would rather caucus with them than you, because they are at least seemingly intelligent."

Callister. He stood upon the floor the Council and said that the flag that was flying at the masthead of the City Council was that 'No Mormon Need Apply.' I wish to say to you, gentlemen, that the evidence is at hand that the flag that is flying at the mast head of the city government, the county government and the state governm Utah is that 'No Gentlle Need Apply.' Councilman Thomas moved as a substitute for the whole that a communi cation be sent to the mayor informing of Chief Hilton removing the three members of the police force. The chief's action was concurred in by a vote of 11 ayes to 3 noes. Robertson and Daveler gave the usual notice that they would ask for a reconsideration
